

Initial Level

At Andrews University, we use a definition of graduation rate that is in alignment with federal Title II reporting procedures. This definition is based on candidates admitted to the Teacher Preparation Program, not students who have expressed interest in teaching or “declared” a teaching major. Based on advising materials and sample course plans, we expect the “normal time” elementary education and secondary education Bachelor’s candidates need to complete the Teacher Preparation Program is three (3) years after acceptance into the Program. The “normal time” for MAT students need to complete their programs is four (4) years. Using the same principle prescribed by the federal government in calculating basic graduation rates, that is upon stating a new degree program, we calculate
